Abstract

The navigational structure comprises of at least three components including: 1) the user interface representing the seeker's frame reference as established by the seekers goals or specified outcomes, 2) a navigational structure providing a set of Access Maps choices which configure using a rule based, hierarchical, Boolean fuzzy logic or mapping method, and 3) a knowledge architecture specifying the inter-relationships between multiple seekers their outcomes and knowledge requirements.